Dean's Address :

Welcome to Velammal Medical College and Research Institute. Congratulations on choosing the noblest of professions. I am sure that this, your well contemplated choice is not one of compulsion or coercion but a calling, a reaffirmation of your intelligence, talent and Achievement.

The medical profession is information intensive, and academically demanding. long periods of study punctuated by very competitive post-graduation and super specialties entrance examinations. Every day new medical knowledge and technologies are added at astounding rates and these calls for late settlement in life and lifelong learning. Although today's world is highly commercial the public image of the medical man is still intact as a 'person who saves lives'. The patient trusts the doctor with his most valuable possession: 'himself'. This is a humbling privilege, not experienced in any other profession, thus your knowledge and sincerity does make a huge difference to the life of a patient.

To survive medical school one must be genuinely interested to learn, be prepared to experience the ups and downs in the rigors of disciplined everyday studies. The foremost key to triumphant learning is to be aware and orient your mind projecting to patient and the treatment they will receive at your hands. The second is to understand that this is going to be tough. Create your own strategies to absorb knowledge.
